INSPIRED.

Pavement markings, worn asphalt, and heavily traveled concrete create direction for us in our daily existence. But what happens below the streets shapes our perspective on elements that create life in the city. It's the intertwining cables, paths, tunnels, and layers of municipal structure that reveal how a city breathes and evolves. City Proper challenges us to examine beyond the expected surface, to consider multiple levels of construction and texture, light and shadow.

INSPIRING.

City Proper from the Constantine Collection brings a combination of loop and tip-shear constructions to the interior. Striking a balance of sharp geometry from city wayfinding with subtle textures reminiscent of the decaying edges of street corners and asphalt transitions. Three patterns—EC1, Design Quarter, and Underground—offer a range of scale that allows each design to stand alone or work easily in coordination with other patterns in the collection. The Milliken Color Reference system also allows easy inclusion of this product with other designs in our product portfolio.
